WHICH JURYMAN?

One in the Webster Case Said to Have Been Tried for Murder.

Prosecutor McIntyre Anonymously Warned Against Him.

A Lawful Wife of the Defendant to Be Produced.

Evelyn Granville's notoriety as "the woman in the case" in the trial of Burton C. Webster for shooting and killing of Charles E. Goodwin, has revived a once brisk market for her photographs.

AMONG THE DISTRICT ATTORNEYS.

An Evening World reporter was so informed by a dealer in pictures of celebrities, only a few years ago, when Evelyn Granville was captivated the patrons of the front row at the comedy and comic opera theatres, her picture in all the beauty-revealing splendor of tight and gaudy was a favorite one on the dressing bureau of the "chappies".

The trial of Webster was resumed to-day before Judge Cowling, in Part III, of the Court of General Sessions, before Evelyn Granville reached the courtroom. She was near by, however, at the offices of Lawyers Howe & Hummel, with her two-month-old baby, Burton C. Webster, Jr., and a colored nurse.

It was the fifth day of the trial. Prosecutors McIntyre and Staples had completed the story of the killing of Charles E. Goodwin in his apartment in the Percival on Aug. 2 last and announced that the case for the prosecution was nearly completed.

There were three stories of the dying statements of the wounded broker, in each of which he named Webster as his slayer. But in one of these accounts Goodwin is reported to have said in the agony of death:

"I meant no harm."

William F. Howe was exceedingly well pleased with this, for he will contend that these words point to the truth of Webster's story that he killed Goodwin in a fight, brought on by Goodwin's insults to Evelyn Granville, Webster's "common law wife," and his attempts to invade her apartments.

Mr. McIntyre says, however, that in answer to such a defense he will destroy its vital force by producing Lizzie Webster, who claims to be the lawfully wedded wife of Burton C. Webster.

If he already had a wife then his honor could not be concerned in any insult, however gross, offered to Evelyn Granville, for she would be the mistress of a dishonorable man, says the Assistant District Attorney.

to be quarrelsome. It is related that he has had many fights, and that on one occasion he drew a weapon upon his adversary.

There are many scars on his face. One, a long slash under the left eye, is said to be an inch long over the eye, and the third a scar on his forehead. He says he got all those scars in accidents when a boy.

SHOWING A DOCUMENT TO THE JURY.

Dr. Howard C. Taylor, of Roosevelt Hospital, was the first witness at today's session.

He testified to the reception at the hospital of Charles E. Goodwin, suffering from a pistol-shot wound in the abdomen, on the evening of Aug. 2, 1921, at about 9 o'clock, and to the death of Goodwin at 2:15 in the morning.

Dr. William A. Conway, a Cornell's physician, testified as to the findings of an autopsy performed upon the body of Charles E. Goodwin.

"From the examination which you have described, what in your judgment was the cause of death?" asked Mr. McIntyre.

"Goodwin died from internal hemorrhage, resulting from a pistol shot wound," replied Dr. Conway.

On the cross-examination Mr. Howe adduced that the pistol wound was about two inches above the navel, and one inch to the right of the median line.

"About here?" asked the big lawyer, placing his finger on his vest just above the inner corner of the pocket that held his diamond-studded chronometer.

Dr. Conway answered in the affirmative. Mr. Howe asked:

"And the bullet went straight in?"

"Yes, sir," replied the witness, and Mr. Howe dismissed him with a satisfied smile.

Arthur Goodwin was the next witness. He is from Minneapolis, Minn., and a brother of Charles E. Goodwin.

Arthur Goodwin is a tall, slender, handsome young fellow, with black eyes, wavy dark hair, clean-cut features and smooth face. He testified in a quick, decisive way that he was with his brother on Aug. 2 till 6 o'clock in the evening when they parted at the Grand Central station, the witness setting out on a journey to the West.

"How old was your brother Charles when he died?" asked the prosecutor.

"At least thirty-four."

"Was he a large, strong man?"

"No, sir; he was about 5 feet, 6 1/2 inches in height and rather slender. He weighed about 150 pounds."

"Where did you live prior and down to Aug. 2?"

LOOKING FOR MAHER.

New Orleans Sports Want to Size Up the Irish Champion.

Northern Men Covering All the Fitzsimmons Money in Sight.

The Report that Madden's Man Is Drinking Generally Discredited.

NEW ORLEANS, Feb. 29.—It is rumormongered that this town has filled up with strangers during the past twenty-four hours. The Mardi Gras festival never attracted so many visitors to this city before. Almost every man in this town is talking about the contest which will take place between the Irish champion and the American champion in the Olympic club's ring next Wednesday night.

Those who have backed Fitzsimmons heavily are doing all they can to boom him with the crowd. Jimmy Carroll, Bob's manager and trainer, came over from Bay St. Louis this morning and went to the St. Charles Hotel. He was immediately surrounded by a large crowd of enthusiastic Fitzsimmons men, who were anxious to hear directly from Bob Carroll said:

"Fitz is in the best possible condition. He was up bright and early this morning and when he stepped upon the scales he pulled down 108 pounds clean. He will take things rather easier from now until Wednesday night. He will come working in a mild way, however, until he is weighed in for the game. Fitz is confident of success and so am I. He will have Maher thinking hard in less than two minutes after the contest begins. We will not leave the Bay until Wednesday.

There are many Northern sporting men in town, and they are taking the Mar and the betting in the manner which indicates that they are afraid they won't get enough.

Very little faith is placed in the gaudiness of the telegram that has been shown by Carroll, and which purports to be from Jim Gibbons. The sports from the North do not believe that Madden would let his man do anything so rash as quench his thirst, with mixed ale, not to speak of getting drunk.

Every one seems anxious to have Maher and Madden settle down in the neighborhood somewhere. They are expected to arrive some time during the day. The fact that so little is known of Maher keeps the local sports on the ragged edge. They want to get a look at the Irish champion, and there has not been a single disturbance that is about Maher seems to be gaining steadily in popularity.

Every bit of available space in the amphitheatre of the Olympic club that can be constructed into a seat has been snapped up, and big premiums are being offered to ticket-holders. The crowd will be a very large one, and will contain representatives from all parts of the Union.

The Ryan-Needham contest before the Metropolitan Club is receiving its share of attention this morning. Both men are in excellent condition. Notwithstanding the fact that Ryan has once defeated Needham, the latter is a favorite in the betting. The tickets for the contest are being sold rapidly at advanced rates.

REPUBLICAN CHIEFS MEET.

State Committee in Session at the Fifth Avenue Hotel.

Parlor D R of the Fifth Avenue Hotel, which has become historic as the scene of the Republican State Convention, was occupied by the Republican State Committee at noon today. That body had been called together for the primary purpose of issuing a call for the State Convention of the party, but it is usual when these leaders from all over the State get together to discuss matters of party policy and to do something more than the mere making of a call and a place for holding the State Convention.

The members of the State Committee and the Congressional Districts they represent are: S. R. Williams, Amityville; D. Israel F. Fisher, New York; S. Charles T. Dunwell, Brooklyn; A. E. M. Harter, Brooklyn; S. Francis F. Williams, Brooklyn; G. William H. Jones, New York; F. L. Van Allen, New York; S. John Collins, New York; G. John H. Nugent, New York; L. William N. Hoag, New York; L. Clarence W. Meade, New York; L. William Brookfield, New York; L. Frank Raymond, New York; L. James M. Husted, Poughkeepsie; L. B. R. O'Neil, Jr., Newburg; L. Louis E. Fay, Chatham; L. James Ballantine, Andes; L. John A. Quackenbush, Stillwater; L. George Campbell, Jones; L. Edward C. Ellis, Hamilton; L. F. D. Kilburn, Malone; L. Isaac L. Hunt, Jr., C. Chickering, Copenhagen; L. Robert Krum, Solvay; L. Francis Hendricks, Syracuse; L. George W. Dunn, Singhamton; L. John A. Camp, Lyons; L. John W. Dwight, Ithaca; L. J. E. Parkhurst, Baiton; L. A. Wadsworth, Genesee; L. John N. Schenck, Buffalo; L. J. Porter, Niagara Falls; L. W. Glen, Cuba.

The committee went into executive session behind closed doors.

It was said that a baby was determined on as the place for holding the Convention, and April 27 named as the date.

Political Potpourri.

Andrew W. Miller, Minister to Germany, is being urged for appointment to succeed Whitelaw Reid as Minister to France.

It is said that there is at the Park Avenue Hotel, a report that a certain "D. D." who is the author of all this excitement but a few fragments of fur.

The "brush" is, however, carefully preserved because it makes an admirable souvenir or may be sold to some enthusiast who has never been the happy possessor of a fox tail.

BOMBS AND A PANIC.

Explosion in the Princess of Sagan's House in Paris.

Nobody Hurt, but a Whole Neighborhood Widely Alarmed.

Herb Al Quiet—French Reception—General Foreign News.

PARIS, Feb. 29.—A tremendous explosion was occasioned in the fashionable Faubourg St. Germain, by an explosion that occurred at an early hour this morning at the residence of the Princess of Sagan.

One of the men servants belonging to the Princess's household was sweeping out the doorway when his broom struck two tubes that are supposed to have contained dynamite. The tubes were thrown against one side of the entrance and instantly there was a flash and tremendous report.

In a moment confusion reigned in the vicinity. People rushed to their windows in all styles of dress and undress, not knowing what at the next moment the walls of their houses would come tumbling about their heads. Others, among whom were a large number of men and maid servants, ran into the street and hastily sought refuge in flight, without stopping to examine whether or not they were in danger.

Gendarmes were promptly at the scene and began an investigation of the affair. They expressed their opinion that the explosion was due to dynamite that had been placed in the doorway by friends of the Princess who have been recently arrested. They also believe from the income tax description given by the man-servant of the appearance of the tubes that they were part of the lot of cartridges stolen from the scene quarries.

The windows of the Princess's residence and of a number of the adjoining houses were blown to atoms, but otherwise no damage of consequence was done. The escape of the servant from instant death was almost miraculous.

TRANQUILLITY IN BERLIN.

Armed Police Interference Not Called for Since Saturday Night.

BERLIN, Feb. 29.—Since Saturday night there has been perfect quiet, and there has not been a single disturbance that is about Maher seems to be gaining steadily in popularity.

It is believed that the disorderly movement has spent its force and that no further trouble is to be apprehended.

Perfect tranquillity prevails even in the districts in which the disorders were most marked.

RECIPROCITY WITH FRANCE.

Minister Reid and M. Roche Reach a Commercial Agreement.

PARIS, Feb. 29.—Mr. Whitelaw Reid, the American Minister, and M. Jules Roche, Minister of Commerce, today arrived at a definite agreement for the establishment of a commercial treaty between France and the United States.

M. Roche will, on Thursday next, introduce a bill in the Chamber of Deputies to ratify the agreement.

More Than Three Hundred Lives Lost Off the Iberian Coast.

LONDON, Feb. 29.—The Times's correspondent gives details of the frightful storm reported from there Saturday. He says:

"It is reported that thirty boats are lost and 300 persons drowned. The loss of life is probably under-rated.

The building was eight stories high, and had a clock tower that stood 107 feet in the air. The first three stories, occupied by the clubbers, were said to be dropped. The remainder of the building, which was a store of bricks and was occupied by the Fulton and Flatbush Storage Company, consisting of Miller F. Smith and W. G. H. Randolph, the owners of the building and the leasing members of the firm of Smith, Gray & Co., was blown away.

The big structure is a total wreck to-day, with only masonry walls and smoking debris rising from the ruins. The clock tower, which was a landmark in the neighborhood, is still standing, but the owners of the building are not yet ready to give out the particulars.

None of the cases were taken to the hospital, and the patients have been removed to River-side Hospital.

MOB LAW IS FEARED.

Indian polis Street-Car Troubles Break Out Again.

A Great Crowd Engaged—Special Officers Beaten.

Intention to Incite the Police Force to One Thousand Men.

INDIAN POLIS, Ind., Feb. 29.—The street-car strike here is resumed. At 10:10 this morning two special policemen were assaulted by a mob of 2,000 people.

The mob on Washington street is very demonstrative, and there will be bloodshed unless the police on number the mob.

Mob law is expected about 11 o'clock when the first car is started.

Last night President Freusel said the running of cars must wait until the police had sufficient force in readiness to meet the mob.

The Board of Public Safety had only about two hundred men of the extra police summoned, and only about one hundred of these had been sworn in.

It was the stated purpose to have one thousand men before another start was made, therefore cars were not expected to run today until late, if at all, and this early trouble was not looked for.

CRUSHED THE "L" STATION.

Traffic Impeded on the Kings County Road by Brooklyn's Big Fire.

Trains on Brooklyn's Kings County "L" road are running a "wild cat" schedule today because the uptown track and part of the station at Flatbush avenue and Fulton street was demolished by the falling clock tower of Smith, Gray & Co.'s big building, which was burned yesterday.

Between Elm place and Lafayette place the downtown track is used by trains going in both directions.

The damage to the "L" structure is no great that it will probably be two or three days before traffic can be resumed on both tracks at the Flatbush avenue station.

The fire that caused such delay to Brooklyn's "L" traffic was one of the most disastrous and stubborn that ever occurred in the City of Churches. The loss will exceed $500,000.

It was discovered in the cellar of Smith, Gray & Co.'s building, where it mysteriously originated, at 12:55 o'clock yesterday afternoon, by saloon-keeper Edward Comer, of 102 Pitt street, who saw smoke escaping from the windows on the Nevada street side of the big clothing house. He told a policeman, who sent in an alarm.

Second, third and fourth floors were seen by the fireman who arrived when he arrived and took in the gravity of the situation.

Twenty-three engines and seven hook and ladder trucks responded, and the men worked busily to get the fire under control. By that time four firemen and one woman had been injured and thousands of dollars' worth of property had been destroyed.

The building was eight stories high, and had a clock tower that stood 107 feet in the air. The first three stories, occupied by the clubbers, were said to be dropped. The remainder of the building, which was a store of bricks and was occupied by the Fulton and Flatbush Storage Company, consisting of Miller F. Smith and W. G. H. Randolph, the owners of the building and the leasing members of the firm of Smith, Gray & Co., was blown away.

The big structure is a total wreck to-day, with only masonry walls and smoking debris rising from the ruins. The clock tower, which was a landmark in the neighborhood, is still standing, but the owners of the building are not yet ready to give out the particulars.

OVERTURE FROM JONASSON. POINTERS ON THE RACES.

Striking Clockmakers Invited to Confer with the Firm.

MEYER JONASSON & Co. this morning informed the striking clockmakers that they were ready to receive a committee to agree upon terms of settlement of the strike. A committee representing the different branches of the trade was accordingly appointed to meet the firm and discuss terms.

It was thought that the action of the Central Labor Union yesterday had not a little to do with bringing about this change of attitude on the part of the firm, which last Saturday refused to receive a committee and declared that the strikers must return, if at all, individually, upon the firm's own terms.

Leader Barondess appeared before the Central Labor Union yesterday, and upon his request that body resolved unanimously to order the affiliated organizations to withdraw their members who may be working at present for Meyer Jonasson & Co.

The Central Labor Union also elected a committee, consisting of James P. Archibald, James A. Fitzgerald, Edward Connel, Thomas Lapine, F. W. Baines, George K. Lloyd and M. J. Brown, with full power to arbitrate the strike.

Lab organizations and individuals wishing to contribute to the clockmakers' strike were notified to send their contributions to Edward B. Murphy, C. L. U. Treasurer, 140 Broadway, 114 and 115 East Thirtieth street.

Labor men agree that it will be well if they quickly to their old jobs, and that they may have a root to shelter them tomorrow night. Even with eviction threatened, they are not likely to return to work, so they are likely to be a long time before they can be employed.

Among those threatened with eviction tomorrow are F. Koch, 167 Clinton street; Louis Herrmann, 108 Orchard street; Charles Rosenbaum, 107 East Ninth street; J. Lips, 133 Madison street; R. Cohen, 304 Henry street; H. Perlsberg, 174 Clinton street; H. Cassano, 174 East Ninth street; Harry Kipper, 38 West 12th street; W. Schneider, 102 Pitt street; L. Krummholz, 20 East 12th street; Bernard Grant, 61 Orchard street; H. B. Glickman, 120 Broadway street, and H. K. 64 Forsyth street.

None of these families had fires in their stores, and the owners had been told that state bread to eat, and surrounding food has been taken down to the street. The owners of these stores are not likely to be able to feed their families, and the owners of these stores are not likely to be able to feed their families.

These, though they are not all the sufferers of the clock strike, the majority are, and the owners of these stores are not likely to be able to feed their families.

FIREBUG OWNS UP.

Tells How He Set a Fire that Destroyed Twelve Horses.

Tore a Lighted Match in the Hay in a Brooklyn Stable.

Police Believe that He Has Caused Many Other Recent Fires.

Twelve horses were suffocated and roasted to death in a blazing stable at 822 Dean street, Brooklyn, shortly after 2 o'clock this morning, and Joseph White, who confessed that he set the building on fire, was arrested two hours later. The police believe that he is responsible for two other fires that occurred in the neighborhood, shortly before the Dean street fire.

White rushed into the Bergen street police station at 2:25 this morning and told Sergeant Metcalfe that he had been visiting and was on his way home when he discovered the stable on Dean street to be on fire. An alarm was sent out.

Several engines belonging in the district were still at work on the Smith, Gray & Co. fire on Fulton street, and it was fifteen minutes before the firemen arrived and were on the upper part of the building above. They broke open the doors, intending to rescue the horses, but the animals were lifeless, having been suffocated by the smoke. Several streams of water were directed on the flames, and the fire was under control in half an hour.

Detective Reynolds was in the station house when White gave the alarm and he suspected him of being the firebug who has been at work in the Tenth Precinct. He started out to arrest him.

Reynolds found White on Dean street at 4 o'clock and brought him to the station-house. At first White denied that he had started the fire. He gave his age as twenty-three years and said he lived with his mother at 468 Dean street. He told the police he had been visiting his aunt at 110 Underhill avenue.

Detective Reynolds visited the house and learned that White had not been there for a month.

When confronted with this statement White broke down and made the following confession:

"I admit that I set fire about 2:10 A. M. to the stable at 822 Dean street by throwing a lighted match into the hay-loft, entrance to which I effected by climbing over the Dean street fence into the lot adjoining and then into the stable-yard. From the door leading to the hay-loft open, I entered and went upstairs, where I threw the lighted match and then came down to the residence of my uncle, Michael McCue, 478 Dean street, and gave the alarm. I also ran to the Tenth Precinct and gave the alarm to the police there."

"I did not set fire to any other stable or building except the one at 822 Dean street."

Detective Reynolds questioned White.

"Did you do it out of malice or to steal, or just because you wanted to see a blaze?"

"I don't know," White replied.

Fire broke out at 12:15 A. M. morning in a one-story building at 443 Bergen street. The blaze was discovered by Thomas Dowling, a member of the Prospect Heights Athletic Club, who was leaving the club-house to go home. Dowling broke open the stable and rescued two horses belonging to Augustus Walton.

Afterward another fire was discovered in the basement of the four-story brick building at 448 Dean street, in a pile of rubbish. This fire was also extinguished. The damage was slight.

Detective Reynolds learned that White was present at both fires.

Within the past month there have been several suspicious fires in the neighborhood. White gave the alarm calling the firemen to Reinhardt's tailor shop, 227 Flatbush avenue.

It is claimed by Reynolds that White was also present at a fire in the rear of 478 Dean street, where White's uncle, Michael McCue, lived with his wife and family. The blaze was started by a lighted cigarette thrown by Justice Tighe in the Butler Street Court this forenoon charged with arson.

"I paid guilty," he said. He was held without bail to await the action of the Grand Jury.

The prisoner declined to make any statement to the press.

The losses on the Dean street stable amounted to about $3,000. Joseph Carey, the owner, lost twelve horses; Fred H. Olland, Michael McCue and McDonald & Byrnes each lost two, George Weigold lost one horse, and the rest of the horses were burned, whose owners are not known. The horses were valued at about $200 each.
